Chicago, Ill., The Busiest Street in the World, So. Water.

- In Busiest Chicago: Sixty-five years age Chicago was a hamlet of less than 5000 persons. Today it is the second city of the continent and the fifth in the world in population, while in commerce it has been truly called "the greatest commercial city the world has ever seen." The combined output of its manufactures in 1905, were over $1,420-80,000, while its wholesale trade was $1,767,304,000. What wonder that this street in the heart of its wholesale district should be called the busiest street in the world. 31.

Chicago, Ill., Logan Monument, Lake front

- The Logan Monument, Chicago, Illinois: The work of Augustus St. Gaudens, who also designed the Lincoln monument in Lincoln Park. Unlike the latter's simple dignity the equestrian statue of General Logan is of unrestrained power. Ornate and beautiful it arouses the enthusiasm of the beholder while its position on the lake-front is admirably suited to its heroic display. 14.

Kaskaskia Canyon, Starved Rock, Illinois State Park

- Starved Rock. Illinois State Park. Contains about 1,000 acres, located in La Salle County. Peacefully situated in the midst of a dense forest – almost hidden with wild, trailing vines and bushes, is the beautiful Kaskaskia canyon – more charming, if possible, than any other canyon in the Parl. What can be more attractive than the combination here of light and shade! The Music of the rippling cascade, the profusion of wild flowers, and the song of forest birds make the place one of enchanting beauty, never to be forgotten.

Gettysburg, Pa, View from Little Round Top, looking towards Wheatfield and Peach Orchard

- From Little Round Top. Looking toward the Wheatfield and the peach Orchard the scene embraces the most sanguinary parts of the field of battle. The cleared space before the thick woods, marked by monuments, is the Wheatfield. It was swept across six times by the contending forces until one might walk across it on the bodies of the slain. Beyond is the Peach Orchard, where Union batteries fired shells without fuse a thirty paces. The immediate foreground is "The Valley of Death." 141.

- PN: ca493

Gettysburg, Pa, Little and Big Round Tops

- Big Round Top surmounted by its observatory, Little Round Top to the left with its monuments. The Emmitsburg Road extends in front of the Round Tops. It ran directly and nearly equidistant between the Federal and Confederate lines of battle; the Federals on the heights, the Confederates on the plan. Pickett's charge on the third day crossed this road to the assault. The smiling fields of to-day are no strangers to that awful ceremony, the burial of the dead in trenches. 147.

Gettysburg, Pa., On Little Round Top, showing 44th, and 12th N.Y. Inft. Monument

- The Empire State Monument. New York, in addition to being represented on the field by the largest number of regimental monuments, has erected in the National Cemetery, near the National Monument itself, a magnificent tribute to her dead, eight hundred and sixty-seven of whom lie in the New York section at the base of the National Monument. Besides New York, the states of Vermont and Minnesota have individual State Monuments on the field where their troops particularly distinguished themselves. 146.

Gettysburg, Pa., Wright Avenue

- Wright Avenue. The importance of Gettysburg as the decisive battle of the war has been recognized by the United States Government, and with unatinted [sic] hand has the field been preserved and embellished. Much of the land about is owned by the United States Government. Where monuments are set amid private surrounds the Government has purchased a plot of ground twenty feet square about each one. Many beautiful avenues have been cut by the government through the battlefield, each of which bears the name of a Union general prominent upon the field. 155.

Gettysburg, Pa., Culp's Hill from E. Cemetery Hill

- Culp's Hill. This formed the Federal right. It was here that the Confederates made their only success of the second day's flight, driving the Federals from their position and occupying their breastworks only to be themselves driven out on the morning of the third day. Upon the left (Little Round Top), the center (Cemetery Hill) and the Right (Culp's Hill), from three in the afternoon until nine at night, the assaulting columns of the Gray were thrown again and again and as heroically met by the Blue. 159.

Gettysburg, Pa., On Culp's Hill looking West

- West from Culp's Hill. Culp's Hill formed the Federal right. It was farthest from the Round Tops, but bore its part in the defense of the Federal position on the second day of battle. The battle was fought on the 1st, 2^d and 3^d of July, 1863. Twenty-nine States had troops in the contending armies, Maryland having commands in both: the Federals, 84,000 men with 327 pieces of artillery; the Confederates, 69,000 men and 250 heavy guns. Total casualties 46,078; Federal losses 23,049, Confederate losses 23,029. 157.

Gettysburg, Pa., High Water-Mark of the Rebellion

- Highwater Mark of the Rebellion. This small copse of trees was the center and focal point of Pickett's charge. It was pointed out by Pickett, who led the charge, to his men as their objective point. Just to the right is the "bloody Angle," where the remnant of 15,000 men met and penetrated the Union lines, but to no purpose. The charge was made at one P. M. on the third day of battle. From its repulse the Confederate arms began to waver; it proved their Waterloo. 140.

Gettysburg, Pa., The Devil's Den

- The Devil's Den is five hundred yards due west from Little Round Top and one hundred feet lower. This was fine rifle range for Confederate sharpshooters, who occupied the natural fortress formed by its boulders and wrought havoc among the Federals upon little Round Top. Eight companies of Berdan's sharpshooters were brought to the summit of Little Round Top and finally dislodge them. After the battle the dead bodies of sixty-eight Confederates were taken from crevices of these boulders. 165.

Gettysburg, Pa., Spanglers Spring.

- Spangler's Spring. This spring, at the foot of Culps Hill, furnished water for the wounded of both armies, when, at the close of hostilities on the night of the second day's battle, both the Blue and the Gray sought here together, a draught for their disabled comrades. A neat structure of granite now incloses [sic] the spring, and all visitors to the field stop to drink from its historic waters. 138.

Gettysburg, Pa., Rostrum, Soldiers National Cemetery

- Rostrum, Nation Cemetery. These grounds embrace seventeen acres of the highest point of Cemetery Hill, given by eh state of Pennsylvania to the care of the united States Government. The burial ground, in twenty-two sections, is arranged in a semicircle. The soldiers rest with their feet toward the center of the semicircle, where the National Monument is located. The dead from each state lie together, a total of 3,590, of whom 979 are unknown. The majority of the unknown fell in the first day's fight, when the enemy stripped the dead. From the rostrum is delivered the annual Memorial Day address. 139.

Rail and Auto Highway, Near Weber Junction, Utah, U. P. System

- Back: Rail and Auto Highway, near Weber Junction, Utah. For years civil engineers were puzzled with the problem of laying a double track through Weber Canyon, Utah, and here is shown the solution of their difficulty in providing a second track, which is the one to the left of this picture. The canyon floor afforded barely space for the original track so the road bed for the second track was blasted from the Canyon wall and is in many points as high as sixty feet above the westbound track, which is the lower of the two.

The Williams Picture of Washington [Back]

- Back: This rare picture of General Washington in Masonic regalia , was painted from life by Williams of Philadelphia. IN 1794 for Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, A. F. & A. M. of Alexandria, Va, of which Washington was then a Past Master. It is probably the only authentic work showing him in advanced age. The apron and sash worn in the picture were inherited by “Lawrence Lewis,” Washington’s nephew who presented them to the Lodge in 1812, where they are still preserved.

Montreal. Notre Dame Church

- Notre-Dame Church. The Church of Notre-Dame de Lourdes is one of the leading Roman Catholic places of worship in Canada, and one of his largest in America. It was erected in 1824, to replace the original edifice built in 1672, and was designed by a Canadian architect, after the style of some of the Churches of Venice. Its towers rise to a height of 227 feet and contain an exceptionally fine peal of bells.

Canadian Rockies, Illecillewaet, Glacier from the Railway

- Back: Illecillewaet Glacier from the Railway. One of the chief attractions for tourists is the Illecillewaet Glacier, and, while not the largest in the Canadian Rockies, it is the most accessible in every way representative of these interesting natural phenomena. A trip across its face leaves a lasting impression on one's memory, The Illecillewaet River takes its rise from this great glacier of the Selkirks.

Dinis Island [sic], Killarney

- Front: When breezes are soft and skies are fair. – W. C. Bryant
- Back: Dinis Island (properly Dine-iske, “The beginning of the waters”) is a well-wooded island situated at the junction of the Middle or Muckross Lake with the Lower Lake of Killarney. On it is situated “O’Sullivan’s Punch Bowl.” This islet is a favourite visiting-place with tourists, as it affords a very fine view of the lakes and vicinity.
